

Quiz

Monday, March 14, 2016 10:48 PM

Question 1

1 / 1 pts

A person following a liberal ideology would likely approve of:

reduced rights of public association.

increased levels of state capacity.

economic equality among citizens.

a low degree of state autonomy.

reduced competition among individuals.

Question 2

1 / 1 pts

Ethnic identity can be defined as:

a set of institutions that bind people together through a common culture.

geographic differences between people.

a set of linguistic differences between otherwise similar people.

a set of economic differences interconnected with cultural values.

a set of biological elements that separate people by race.

Question 3

1 / 1 pts

Which of the following concepts or phenomena was first and most directly connected to state development?

extensions of citizenship to multiple ethnic groups

increased calls for sovereignty

growing ethnic identity

growing national identity

written language

Question 4

1 / 1 pts

Following from the work of Bruce Lawrence, fundamentalism can be defined as:

an ideology that seeks to unite religion with the state.

a high degree of religious orthodoxy.

a desire to return a society to its premodern roots.

any deeply held value that combines political and religious views.

the use of violence toward religious ends.

Question 5

1 / 1 pts

Which of the following statements about citizenship, national identity, and patriotism is accurate?

Citizenship is much less variable than national or ethnic identity

Citizenship is much less variable than national or ethnic identity.

Citizenship is rigid in scope and power, unlike ethnic or national identity.

Citizenship is likely to be more flexible than ethnic identity.

High degrees of national identity necessarily spark high degrees of patriotism.

Patriotism typically gives rise to more inclusive citizenship.

Question 6

1 / 1 pts

Conservatives are those in the political spectrum who favor:

restoring structures that once existed.

little or no change to existing institutions.

revolutionary change of the status quo.

lower taxes.

evolutionary change of the status quo.

Question 7

1 / 1 pts

Political culture can be defined as:

the views of a society toward the role of culture and its place in politics.

how politicians conduct their campaigns.

the level of political modernization in a country.