Strengths Perspective

- How Joe brought the community together and they wouldn't let themselves be outdone.
- How the men in the community bought weapons and ammunition to fight off the higher authorities to fight for their good cause.
- Well there is one thing I can say about the Hispanic community is their closeness and their bonding with one another. While observing these attributes it reminds me of when we were growing up and all the people would keep an eye out for one another. But now this has diminished.

Strengths Perspective Contd.

- The land and water was a vital part of the community that had been in their generation for years. But then it was taken away by the more wealthy people who had more money and resources than the poor community in Milagro. But the twist was when Joe planted the beanfield.
