

I believe that the most effective types of visuals that would be appropriate for my topic are Statistics, Line graphs, pie charts, pictures or art. My topic is on drugs and I intend to show how drugs affect the American society mentally, physically and psychologically as a whole. Therefore, I need visuals that will allow me to do that in the most professional and easiest way possible. The visuals are going to be placed after the written explanation of my subtopics, arguments, and counterarguments, probably somewhere in the middle of my paper and near the end. These visuals will provide my audience with an image (a visual story) that coincides with my description of the arguments that are presented. It will shed light on a visual background on what I am trying to express.

Drugs are used in many different ways, the picture below shows different instruments used in distributing drugs in an individual's system.

http://www.ohsinc.com/Drug\_User\_Paraphernalia\_example\_1.jpg

Drugs can lead to personal and professional ruin, the chart below demonstrates the different negative effects drugs can have on an individual in American society.

